ABSTRACT

Washington state law directs the state's Higher Education Coordinating Board to recommend state tuition and fee policies to the Governor and Legislature. As part of its analysis, the Board conducts an annual survey of tuition and fee rates at public colleges and universities in all 50 states to determine how Washington state tuition and fees compare both nationally and with other western states. Also examined is how tuition and fees at individual institutions compare with tuition and fees charged by comparable institutions nationwide. Findings show that Washington resident undergraduates pay somewhat less than the national average for tuition at the four-year institutions, but at the community and technical college level, Washington residents pay a little more than the national average. The difference between Washington and "average" tuition and fee rates are more pronounced among comparable (peer) institutions. Resident undergraduate tuition and fee rates in Washington are higher than in most western states, but Washington's rank in tuition levels among states and peers has remained steady. Significant spikes in tuition have occurred in every recession since the 1970s, and the cycle appears to be repeating. Over the last 10 years, tuition and fees have increased 103% at the University of Washington, while the national average of tuition and fees has increased 78% over the same period. Three appendixes discuss data methods, and list state tuition and fees by institution and institutions participating in the study. (Contains 10 figures and 37 tables.) (SLD)

2002-03 Washington State Tuition and Fee Report

Executive Summary

Background

State law directs the Higher Education Coordinating Board (HECB) to recommend state tuition and fee policies to the Governor and Legislature. As part of its analysis, Board staff conducts an annual survey of tuition and fee rates at public colleges and universities in all 50 states to determine how Washington State tuition and fees compare both nationally and with other Western states. In addition, staff examines how tuition and fees at individual Washington institutions contrast with tuition and fees charged by comparable institutions nationwide. These comparable institutions are referred to as "peer" institutions throughout this report. The following are key findings from this year's tuition and fee report.

Key Findings

- Washington resident undergraduates pay somewhat less than the national average for tuition at the four-year institutions.
    - The University of Washington (UW) and Washington State University (WSU) are below the national average by 2 and 3 percent respectively.
    - Washington comprehensive institutions are within 7 percent of the national average.

- At the community and technical colleges, Washington residents pay a little more than the national average.
    - Washington community and technical colleges exceed the national average by 1 percent ($25).

- The differences between Washington and "average" tuition and fee rates are more pronounced among comparable (peer) institutions.
    - UW and WSU are below their peer averages by 12 percent and 5 percent respectively for resident undergraduate tuition and fees.

- Resident undergraduate tuition and fee rates in Washington are higher than in most western states.
    - UW and WSU are highest among the Western (WICHE) states for resident undergraduate tuition and fees. Washington comprehensives and the community and technical colleges rank fourth and fifth respectively among the Western states.

- Washington's rank in tuition levels among states and peers has remained steady. For example, UW nationally ranked 23rd in 1999 and ranks 21st today.
    - Washington comprehensive institutions ranked 26th in 1999 and rank 28th today, while the community colleges ranked 22nd in 1999 and 23rd today.

- Significant spikes in tuition have occurred in every recession since the 1970s, and the cycle appears to be repeating.

- Over the last 10 years, tuition and fees have increased 103 percent at the University of Washington. The national average of tuition and fees has increased 78 percent over the same period.

2002-03 Resident Undergraduate Tuition and Fees

Institution	Tuition and Fees
University of Washington - Seattle	$4,566
Washington State University - All	$4,520
Central Washington University	$3,498
Eastern Washington University	$3,462
The Evergreen State College	$3,440
Western Washington University	$3,453
Community and Technical Colleges	$1,982

The following tables show Washington's ranking nationally as well as by respective peer group for each institution or sector, and for the Western states, i.e., the 15 states that participate in the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE).

It should be noted that Washington State University is compared with the national flagship universities in the following tables. But in the tuition and fee survey, only the University of Washington is represented in Tables 1 through 4 as Washington's flagship university. Detailed tuition and fee data for WSU and its peer institutions are contained in Peer –Tables 5 through 8 and 15 and 16.

Note: Tuition includes operating and building fee plus mandatory fees.

Washington's Tuition and Fee Increases Over Time

The 2002-03 tuition and fee increases at Washington public institutions compared to the prior year were among the highest for any year in the previous decade. Resident undergraduate tuition and fees increased 14.6 percent at the University of Washington, 16 percent at Washington State University, 13 percent at Central, Eastern, and Western Washington universities, 13.8 percent at The Evergreen State College and 13.7 percent at the community colleges. These amounts reflect total tuition and required fees at the institutions. Because required fees may increase at rates less than that authorized by the Legislature, these percentages vary from the authorized amount. In the community college system, tuition is now based on a per credit hour charge. The percentage above reflects the tuition and fee amount paid by a student taking 15 credit hours. In all sectors -- research, comprehensive and community and technical colleges – tuition (operating and building fee) increased at the maximum legislatively authorized amount: 16 percent, 14 percent and 12 percent respectively.

During the last decade, Washington resident undergraduate tuition and fees have outpaced both Washington per capita personal income (PCPI) and inflation. Since 1992-93, tuition and fees have increased 103 percent at the University of Washington (for resident undergraduates), while the PCPI has increased 51 percent. The growth in the rate of inflation (22 percent) continues to lag both tuition and the PCPI.

2002-03 WASHINGTON STATE TUITION AND FEE REPORT

January 2003

CHAPTER 1: 2002-03 WASHINGTON STATE TUITION AND FEES

As part of its yearly analysis of tuition and fees, HECB staff conducts an annual survey of tuition and fee rates at public colleges and universities in all 50 states to determine how Washington State tuition and fees compare both nationally and with other Western states. In addition, staff examines how tuition and fees at individual Washington institutions compare with tuition and fees charged by their respective "peer" institutions.

In 1988, a joint legislative and executive study group, in consultation with the HECB, adopted a national comparison "peer" group for each of the following: (1) the University of Washington (flagship), (2) Washington State University, (3) comprehensive institutions, which include Central, Eastern and Western Washington universities, (4) The Evergreen State College, and (5) the Washington community and technical college system. For a more detailed description of the peer group selection, see page 13.

Undergraduate tuition and fees for comprehensive institutions are based on data from 214 public colleges and universities. Graduate tuition and fees are based on data from the same group of public colleges and universities, although not all offer graduate programs. Required fees are fees paid by all full-time students and do not include any optional fees, such as parking or health care, unless they are paid by all full-time students.

Following is a summary of how 2002-03 tuition and fees at Washington colleges and universities compare with all 50 states, with other Western states, and with peer institutions.

National Comparison

To better understand how Washington tuition and fee rates compare nationally, HECB staff looked at three categories: (1) flagship universities, (2) comprehensive colleges and state universities, and (3) community colleges. The following summary tables provide an overview of the relationship of tuition and fee rates at Washington colleges and universities to national averages. Tables also graph this year's percentage increases in resident undergraduate tuition and fee rates for each state.

For more detailed analysis by category and a national perspective over the last five years, see the tables in Section IV (National Tables 1-10). Tables 1 through 4 represent tuition and fee rates at the public flagship university in each state.

Tables 5 through 8 represent the average tuition and fees for a selected set of comprehensive colleges and universities in all 50 states. Washington institutions represented in this sector include

Central Washington University, Eastern Washington University and Western Washington University. (The Evergreen State College is compared with its own set of peer institutions in Peer Tables 17 through 20. It is presented in the following table for comparison to the comprehensive peer group). The comprehensive colleges and universities peer group, created in 1969, is composed of 214 institutions reporting undergraduate tuition and fees and 192 of those reporting graduate tuition and fees. Although not all public institutions are included in this survey, the averages and changes over time with the same set of institutions offer consistency, while the large number of institutions provides a close approximation of state averages. Tables 9 and 10 display state averages for community colleges.

Note: The Legislature and Governor authorized tuition increases up to 16 percent at the research universities, 14 percent at the comprehensive universities and college and 12 percent at the community and technical colleges for 2002-03. The percentage increase in the table above reflects the actual annual increase in total tuition and fees (building, operating, services and activities fees, and technology). Services and activities fees and technology fees may not always increase at the same rate as "tuition," i.e., operating and building fee. See "Washington's Tuition and Fee Structure" (page 17) for a more complete description.

The following charts display Washington resident undergraduate tuition and fee rates for 2002-03 by sector (research [flagship], comprehensive, and the community and technical colleges) as compared to other states nationwide. Also displayed by sector are the state rankings by percentage increases in tuition and fees as reported in this year's tuition and fee survey. For more information on the WICHE and peer averages, refer to pages 12 through 16.

Resident Undergraduate Tuition and Fees 2002-03

Research Universities

University of Washington (flagship):

- The University of Washington ranks 21st nationally in the amount of tuition and fees charged to resident undergraduates. (The state with the highest tuition and fees would rank number 1.) The tuition and fee increase at the UW this year was the 8th highest percentage increase in the country.
    - The UW increased resident undergraduate tuition and fees 14.6 percent in 2002-03; the national average increased 9.8 percent.
    - In 2002-03, 17 states increased tuition and fees 10 percent or more as compared to seven states in 2001-02.
    - Four states increased tuition and fees more than 20 percent, and four states increased tuition and fees three percent or less.

Note: UW is considered the "flagship" university" and is used for the national flagship university comparison in the tuition survey. Tuition and fees for WSU are reported in the Peer-Tables 5 through 8 and 15 and 16.

Washington State University:

- Washington State University also ranks 21st nationally in the amount of tuition and fees charged to resident undergraduates if compared to the national flagship universities. The tuition and fee increase at the WSU this year was the 8th highest percentage increase nationally for flagship universities.
    - WSU increased resident undergraduate tuition and fees 16 percent in 2002-03; the national average increased 9.8 percent.

Comprehensive Universities (Central, Eastern, and Western Washington Universities)

- Washington's comprehensive institutions rank 28th nationally in the amount of tuition and fees charged to resident undergraduates. The tuition and fee increase at Washington's comprehensive institutions was the 12th highest in the country.
- Washington comprehensive institutions increased resident undergraduate tuition and fees 13 percent in 2002-03; the national average increased 10 percent.
- In 2002-03, 18 states increased tuition and fees 10 percent or more as compared to nine states in 2001-02.
- Two states increased tuition and fees more than 20 percent and one state increased tuition and fees 3 percent or less.
- The Evergreen State College ranks comparably if compared to the comprehensive universities nationally. Evergreen's peer data is offered in Peer – Tables 17 through 20.

Washington's Community and Technical Colleges

- Washington's community and technical colleges rank 23rd nationally in the amount of tuition and fees charged to resident undergraduates. The tuition and fee increase at Washington's community and technical colleges was the 5th highest in the country.
- Washington community and technical colleges increased resident undergraduate tuition and fees 13.7 percent in 2002-03; the national average increased 8.3 percent.
- In 2002-03, 14 states increased tuition and fees 10 percent or more as compared to 10 states in 2001-02.
- Two states increased tuition and fees more than 20 percent, and six states increased tuition and fees 3 percent or less.

Western States Comparison

HECB staff compared tuition and fees at Washington public colleges and universities with those at public colleges and universities in 14 other Western states. Like Washington, these states are members of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE). They include Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

The summary table and graph below compares Washington tuition and fee rates with those of other WICHE states. Please note that the comprehensive universities include Central, Eastern and Western Washington universities. The Evergreen State College (TESC) is represented within its own peer group and, consequently, is represented in the Peer Institution Comparison section. TESC is presented separately in the graph for information.

For more detailed analysis, see the tables in Section IV in this report (WICHE States Tables 1-10). Tables 1 through 8 display historical and current tuition and required fee rates for full-time undergraduate and graduate students at public four-year colleges and universities in the Western states. Tables 9 and 10 display the average tuition and fee rates for community colleges in each Western state.

Peer Institution Comparison

In 1988, the HECB undertook a study to develop peer groups reflecting a national perspective. Concurrently, a special joint legislative and executive study group was appointed to review the higher education master plan funding recommendations, with peer comparison groups identified as one of its areas of study. The Joint Study Group and the Board worked together and adopted the following peer policies:

1. The Carnegie Commission's classification of institutions is used as the basis for selecting comparison groups for Washington institutions of higher education.

2. The national comparison group for the University of Washington is all public institutions in the Carnegie classification Research Universities category I with medical schools. These institutions typically offer a wide range of baccalaureate programs and are committed to graduate education through the doctorate level.

3. The national comparison group for Washington State University is all public land grant universities in the Carnegie classification Research Universities categories I and II with veterinary schools. Research category II differ from category I by the fewer number of doctoral degrees offered.

4. The national comparison group for Central, Eastern, and Western Washington Universities is all public institutions in the Carnegie classification Comprehensive Colleges and Universities category I. These institutions typically offer a wide range of baccalaureate programs and are committed to graduate education through the master's degree.

5. The national comparison group for the Washington community college system is all state community college systems.

In 1990, the HECB adopted a peer group for The Evergreen State College using the Carnegie Commission classification of institutions. The Board screened a composite category of public institutions in the Comprehensive I and Liberal Arts II classification. (Institutions in the Liberal Arts II classification are primarily undergraduate colleges with major emphasis on baccalaureate programs.) The selected peer institutions were also based on size, similarities of degrees awarded, and other characteristics common to The Evergreen State College.

The summary table on the following page shows tuition and fee rates at Washington public colleges and universities compared to those of their respective peer groups.

For more detailed analysis, see the tables in Section IV of this report. Peers Tables 1 through 20 display peer groups for the University of Washington, Washington State University and The Evergreen State College. Peer groups for Washington comprehensive institutions, with the exception of The Evergreen State College, are represented in National Tables 5 through 8. Washington community colleges are represented in National Tables 9 and 10

Also included in the peer comparison section (Peers Tables 9 through 16) are tuition and fee data for the University of Washington's professional programs of medical, dental, and law. Tables 15 and 16 display veterinary medicine tuition and fee rates for Washington State University and its national peer group.

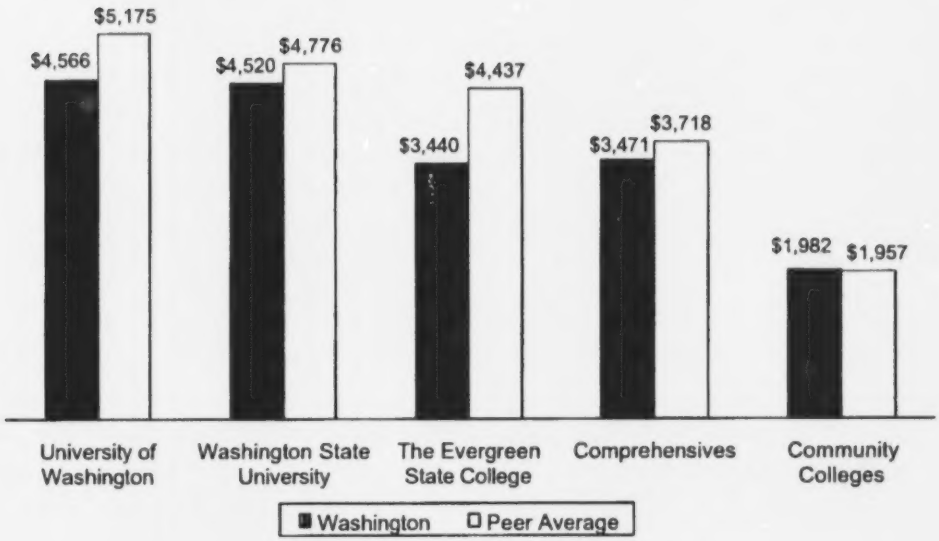
Resident Undergraduate Tuition and Fees: Washington Compared to Peer Averages 2002-03



CHAPTER 2: WASHINGTON'S TUITION AND FEE STRUCTURE

Components of Tuition and Fees

Often the phrase "tuition and fees" is used to refer to the charges that all students pay to attend a college or university. At Washington colleges and universities, "tuition and fees" includes operating fees, building fees, services and activities fees, and technology fees. The actual "tuition" portion, as outlined in statute, includes operating fees and building fees.

In this report, the word "tuition" refers to all major types of fees (operating, building, services and activities, and technology fees). However, for legislation, which specifies "tuition," as is the case currently where allowable tuition increases are specified in statute, tuition refers only to the total of operating and building fees combined.

Operating Fee

The operating fee represents 80 to 90 percent of tuition and fees and primarily funds instructional activities of the institution.

Building Fee

The building fee, which comprises 3 percent to 10 percent of tuition and fees, is used to fund building projects and retire bonds. During most of the past decade, the building fee portion of tuition was a fixed dollar amount set in statute. While operating fees increased, the building fee did not. Legislative changes in 1993 provided for increases in the amount of tuition dedicated to building fees. In 1995-96, the building fee became a percentage of total tuition and fees, rather than a fixed amount and, consequently, increased as overall tuition increased.[1]

Services and Activities Fee

The services and activities fee (S&A), which represents 8 percent to 12 percent of tuition and fees, funds non-instructional student activities and programs, including some bond repayments for student-support facilities. S&A fees may increase each year, if the services and activities fee committee at an institution initiates a request. However, the S&A rate increases may not exceed tuition rate increases for the applicable tuition category.[2]

Technology Fee

In 1996, the Legislature also authorized the public four-year institutions to impose technology fees of up to $120 per year. Four institutions, including the University of Washington, Western Washington University, Central Washington University, and Eastern Washington University, now charge this fee, but no institution is currently at the maximum allowed in statute. Although capped at $120, the technology fee may be adjusted or abolished with approval of the student government association and the institutional governing board.[3] Currently, this fee represents 3 percent, or less of total tuition and fees.

The table below illustrates the relationship among the various fees for resident undergraduates. Nonresident tuition and fees – for students who are not residents of Washington – are considerably higher.

Comparison of Tuition to the Total Cost of Instruction

Washington public colleges and universities receive resources for instruction from two primary sources: operating fee revenue (tuition) and the State General Fund. Therefore, the tuition paid by an individual student covers a portion of the total cost incurred by colleges and universities to provide the instructional program for each student. Prior to 1995, tuition was charged as a specified percentage of the total cost of instruction. Since 1995, the Legislature and Governor have set (or capped) tuition without specific reference to the total cost of instruction.

[3] RCW 28B.15.051.

For an undergraduate student, the following table shows the proportion of costs covered by tuition. In the current 2002-03 academic year, resident tuition makes up approximately one-third of the cost at comprehensive institutions and community colleges, and nearly one-half of the cost at research universities. (The remaining portion of costs are covered primarily by the State General Fund, i.e., from state taxes.) Tuition for nonresident undergraduates covers the entire cost of instruction.

Total Amount of Tuition Revenue Generated

In fiscal year 2002-03, institutions will receive about $480 million from tuition. In comparison, institutions will receive approximately $1.2 billion from the State General Fund.[4]

Tuition at Washington's Technical Colleges

In 1991, Washington's technical colleges merged with the community college system. Although the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges (SBCTC) now oversees both the technical and community colleges, the two types of schools set tuition differently. Following the merger, a SBCTC task force reviewed the tuition process and recommended, with SBCTC approval, that tuition responsibility for the technical colleges remain at the local level. Technical colleges (and the Seattle Vocational Institute) set tuition and retain it in local accounts. The task force determined that this method provides significant flexibility and allows the colleges to make decisions based on local needs.

Each technical college sets tuition locally, based on program costs and market influences. Tuition rates are generally comparable across the technical colleges for similar programs and comparable to rates at community colleges.

CHAPTER 3: TUITION HISTORY IN WASHINGTON STATE

Historical Overview

1977-1995: Legislature Links Tuition Rates to the Cost of Instruction

Between 1977 and 1995, the Legislature established tuition rates as a percentage of the cost of instruction. In 1977, when this approach was enacted by the Legislature, a Carnegie Commission study, Who Pays? Who Benefits? Who Should Pay? determined that, nationally, tuition covered 24 percent of the cost of instruction at public higher education institutions. The Commission recommended that this proportion be increased to 33 percent within 10 years.

Under this "cost-sharing" approach, the student contributed a specified portion of the cost, and the state provided the remainder. Cost-sharing assumes that both the student and society benefit from having an educated and productive citizenry.

To determine undergraduate and graduate instructional costs, the Legislature directed the HECB to develop and perform a cost study every four years.[5] Using cost study data, the HECB transmitted to the institutions the cost basis upon which tuition would be established.

1995-1999: Legislature Sets Tuition in Statute

In 1995, the Legislature removed the direct link to the cost of instruction and instead set tuition in statute as dollar amounts for each public institution. Although 1995 legislative intent stated that the tuition increases of 1995-96 and 1996-97 were a "transition measure until final action is taken in 1997,"[6] the practice of specifying dollar amounts was continued through the 1997-99 biennium.

Tuition amounts (or percentage increases) specified in statute have referred only to the "tuition" portion of tuition and fees. Public colleges and universities may assess additional fees, such as services and activities fees and technology fees. State statutes establish maximum amounts that can be charged for these additional fees, which vary by institution.

The Legislature also directed the HECB to continue to conduct the cost study and submit "approved undergraduate and graduate educational costs to the several boards of regents and trustees of the state institutions of higher education by November 10 of each even-numbered year..."[7]

1999-2001: Legislature Gives Limited Tuition-Setting Authority to Institutions

For the first time, in academic year 1999-2000, the Legislature and Governor gave institutions limited local tuition-setting authority, within maximums. The 1999-2001 operating budget authorized colleges and universities to increase tuition up to 4.6 percent in the 1999-2000 academic year and 3.6 percent in the 2000-2001 academic year.

2001-2002 academic year: Limited Tuition-Setting Authority Continues

The Legislature and Governor continued to give institutions limited local tuition-setting authority in academic year 2001-2002, with tuition increases authorized up to 6.7 percent. However, maximum tuition increases for graduate programs of law and business were set at 12 percent, and the University of Washington was allowed to increase tuition up to 15 percent for its graduate business programs.

2002-2003 academic year: Limited Tuition-Setting Authority for Resident Undergraduates (other categories unlimited)

Institutions were allowed specified maximum percentage increases (above the prior year's tuition) for resident undergraduates, as follows:

Research Universities (UW and WSU)	16%
Comprehensive Institutions (CWU, EWU, TESC, WWU)	14%
Community and Technical Colleges	12%

These increases were among the highest for any year in the previous decade. And, in all cases, the institutions found it necessary to raise tuition to the allowable maximum.

For other student categories – graduate and professional students and all non-residents – no maximum was placed on allowable tuition increases.

In 2002-2003, Washington's community and technical colleges changed the basis of tuition and fees from a full-time, part-time basis to a per credit hour base. Tuition and fees reported here reflect the amount charged to a student taking 15 credit hours.

The table on the following page compares tuition increases for the past two years for each public four-year institution, and for the community and technical colleges.

* UW graduate tuition in 2002-03 is charged at three rates; this represents tier 1 level.

Note: Professional tuition rates vary at UW and WSU. The tables in Section IV show tuition rates for specific professional programs.

The average community college tuition was authorized to increase 12 percent. Because community college tuition is now based entirely on credit-hour charges, for a student taking 15 credits the increase is 13.7 percent.

Tuition Increases Over Time

Washington resident undergraduate tuition and fees have increased significantly since 1992-93, and have outpaced both Washington per capita personal income (PCPI) and inflation. The growth in the rate of inflation continues to lag both tuition and the PCPI.

The following tables show the changes in tuition and fees over the past decade for full-time undergraduate students. These tables reflect the total of tuition (operating and building fees), the services and activities fee, plus the technology fee charged by some Washington institutions.

For the last several years, actual tuition and fees have varied slightly among Washington institutions within each category, i.e., research and comprehensive. The following tables display resident undergraduate tuition and fee increases for Washington institutions compared to national average increases.

Data Methods

All data contained in this report were compiled using Washington Higher Education Coordinating Board (HECB) surveys of state agencies or individual institutions. HECB staff greatly appreciates the continued cooperation and assistance of survey respondents. Their efforts to provide accurate and timely data have helped make these reports source documents for many states as they develop their own tuition and fee analyses.

With each annual survey, respondents have an opportunity to review and revise previously reported data. Though small in number, such revisions modestly affect the national averages from those displayed in earlier reports. Revisions may reflect a mid-year surcharge, discontinuation of a nonresident differential, or an adjustment in incidental fees.

Data for the state colleges and universities in Tables 5 through 8 represent the average undergraduate charges at 214 state public institutions and the average graduate charges at 192 of those with graduate programs. Although not all public institutions are included in this survey, the averages and changes over time at the same set of institutions offer consistency, and the large number of institutions included provides a close approximation to state averages. Washington universities included in this average include Central Washington University, Eastern Washington University, and Western Washington University. Tuition and fee rates for The Evergreen State College are displayed in the Peer Institution Comparison section of the report.

For reporting comparability, full-time undergraduate students were based on 45 quarter hours or 30 semester hours and full-time graduate students were based on 30 quarter hours or 20 semester hours. Tuition and required fees include total academic year tuition and required fees for full-time students. Optional fees, such as parking or health care, are not included unless they are paid by all full-time students.

Data Availability

Data contained in this report, as well as the historical data since 1972-1973, are available upon request.
